BIBLE LECTURE TENT—TABERNACLE

Extra chairs were set up to accomodate the people that crowded into the Bible Lecture Tent-Tabernacle last Sunday night to hear the lecture on Hell. Mr. French, youth evangelist, calmly and clearly presented Bible evidence as he answered the questions upon which the lecture was built. This coming Sunday night, July 15, is the time when the evangelist will show actual photographs of spirits caught in the "vacance chair" as he equally important subject, "Ten Minutes after Death" is scheduled for Tuesday, July 17.

Queen, Princess Visit Her; What a Story to Relate

LONDON.—There was a knock on the door, and Mrs. L. Emson opened it to find the queen of England standing there.

"May we come in?" asked the queen, who was accompanied by Princess Elizabeth and the mayor of the borough of Southwark.

Mrs. Emson gasped assent. Then the queen explained she noticed the brightly painted house as she was driving by and, being told it was a prefabricated dwelling, decided to make the informal visit.

The queen said she liked the house. Then she left, and Mrs. Emson began telling neighbors the story that will last her lifetime.

Yanks Win Over Brain Injuries

They Learn to Talk, Write And Read Again in Army Special Hospital.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—There is a small group of battle veterans at Percy Jones hospital who must learn all over again how to talk, to read and to write, because a bullet has destroyed or injured the parts of their brains that control the understanding and expression of language.

These are called aphasics. They are not [illegible] but they [illegible] page, realize they once knew what it said, but can't read it. They hear you talk, but don't know what the words mean.

These men will talk and read again. They will be normal, useful citizens. That is the determination of Lt. Bernard Foster of Ann Arbor and Miss Vivian Mowat of Adrian, who are heading the aphasic school at Percy Jones.

Aphasia has been known to science for many years, but this school is one of the first organized attempts ever made to cure its sufferers. Even among soldiers, who run the greatest risk of head injuries, aphasia is not common, which probably is why so little has been done on the curative side. Foster told the Associated Press.

The army, which is treating aphasics in 19 neurological centers, does not disclose figures on the number of cases but says they are "not particularly large."

In civilians aphasia follows automobile accidents, falls or strokes.

Better Than Ever.

"There is no reason why any of our men, unless they are too severely injured, shouldn't return to their former work and in many cases be better than they were," declared Miss Mowat, an attractive blonde who was drafted by the army from speech correction work in the Ann J. Kellogg school in Battle Creek.

The training program here, not yet five months old, is based on the idea that the average brain has many unused cells and that talking, reading, writing can be restored with new cells.

Lieutenant Foster, a neurologist graduated from the University of Michigan medical school, is anxious that people know about aphasia and particularly that it can be helped.

"It's admiration, not pity, that these men deserve," he stated. "Relearning is a long, difficult process, filled with frustration and disappointment.

"Just think how you feel when you can't recall a name. Now try to imagine you feel that way all the time."

Perhaps the story told by an aphasic will make it even more clear. He is a 32-year-old former newspaper reporter who is determined that in two years he will be a better newsman than he was before.

"You have to start all over—from the beginning," he says, haltingly. "When I was in that other hospital I didn't even know my name. I didn't know it when I heard it, I couldn't say it. But I knew I had a name."

Now He Talks.

A hospital worker helped him to learn his name and a few other words before he came here less than four months ago. He can talk now," he went on. "Not as well as I will, though.

"I learn faster than some boys because I had a little more knowledge before and I wasn't hurt as bad. It is spelling that is hard, and reading. I have to read aloud to make it mean something. But that will come, too."

Primarily the teaching of aphasics is an individual proposition. You have to know the patient, his background, what he wants to do and how much trouble he has.

"The first things we teach are what the patients need to know to satisfy immediate needs. At the top of the list are their names."

Along with the individual work comes classes. As soon as Miss Mowat is acquainted with a patient, she puts him in the classes he needs.

Skipper in Last War Is Sorry He Saved Doenitz

NEW ORLEANS. — Britian-born Capt. William H. John admits he made a mistake in the First World war when his convoy sloop, H.S.S. Snapdragon, rescue- Adm. "He was very arrogant, and was very much insulted because we had sunk his submarine.

British Troops Grab Japanese Equipment

CALCUTTA.—British 14th army troops mopping up the scores of thousands of Jap soldiers to fend for themselves in Burma have captured enemy guns and equipment at Tenasama, 27 miles south of Mintha, a communique said. Mintha is on the Irrawaddy river, 250 miles above the captured capital of Rangoon.

Record Established for Drawing Room Occupancy

PRINCE RUPERT, B. C. — The old woman who lived in a shoe had nothing on the mother and father who boarded a Canadian National railways train here for a trip to Alberta. When the conductor made his rounds to collect the tickets he nearly fainted. Eleven members of the family—parents and nine children—occupied the drawing room the father had previously reserved. No report has been received as to how they bedded down at night. One thing is certain, however: a new kind of record has been established for drawing room occupancy.

Fight to Conquer Germany Costs U. S. 139,488 Lives

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The fight to bring Germany to her knees cost the United States army 732,270 casualties, including 139,488 dead, up to about April 1, the war department reported recently.

In addition to those killed, 467,408 were wounded and 72,374 are missing. This includes the campaigns in the Mediterranean area, including north Africa, on the continent, in the middle east and in the Caribbean sector.

The department said that the figures do not include all the men taken prisoner by the Germans although many of the missing were taken prisoner. Neither do the figures take into account the prisoners liberated by the Allied armies.

In a tabulation released recently, American losses in all theaters since Pearl Harbor exceeded 950,000.

Army casualties in all theaters through April 21 were placed at 170,407 killed, 520,403 wounded, 80,364 missing and 77,110 prisoners—874,089 over-all. The navy at that time reported 40,271 killed, 47,739 wounded, 10,123 missing and 4,250 prisoners, a total of 102,383.

Take My Word For It!

ADDRESS

Americans seem to be divided into two camps over the pronunciation of address, the noun, when used to mean "one's house number and street."

The first group trumpets: "Only an illiterate would say 'AD-dress!'" The second replies, "Pooh! Since most Americans say 'AD-dress,' why isn't it correct?"

Well, here is the box score of seven reputable American dictionaries:

Only choice of four, and first choice of three: ah-DRESS. Second choice of three: AD-dress.

Note carefully, however, that no dictionary sanctions "AD-dress" for the noun meaning "a written or spoken communication," as an address of welcome.

Q.—Is there a word that designates a person who murders a close relative?

A.—The suffix -cide means "killer." One who murders a close relation, or his ruler, is a parricide. One who murders anyone at all is a homicide (HOMM-i-side).

One who kills his mother is a matricide (MAY-tri-side). One who kills his father is a patricide (either PAY-tri-side or PAT-ri-side).

He who kills his brother is a fratricide (FRAT-ri-side). If he kills his sister he is a sororicide (SOR-ROR-i-side). The killer of an infant is an infanticide (in-FAN-ti-side).

Find Germany Now Country of Women

Survey Shows Ratio Is About Five Women to Two Men.

WIESBADEN, GERMANY.—American officers coming to grips with the task of governing Germany are somewhat startled by the realization they have on their hands a nation which is largely feminine.

Preliminary surveys show that at the moment there are five women for every two German men in the adult productive years and this was expected to weigh heavily in the postwar behavior of the country, involving psychological considerations with which veteran officers admit they are unfamiliar.

Even the return of German prisoners will not balance the situation until today's children grow up. As a consequence hundreds of thousands of maturing German women face the prospect of a husbandless life if the nation is going to stick to monogamy.

The Nazi slave labor system released an extraordinarily high proportion of German men for the fronts where they became casualties or prisoners. Now the burdens of reconstruction and reparations sacrifices are to fall most heavily on women and if, in addition, it is to be a loveless life, it may lead, in the opinion of some officers, to a spiritual smashup which could have repercussions far beyond the German frontiers.

Lt. U. C. Biel of New York City, military government officer making a study of this factor, said if even one frustrated woman was unpredictable the mass of feminine frustration which seems in store for Germany was completely outside the bounds of calculation and could bring strange unprecedented slants to the postwar mentality.

Find Europe's Health Better Than Expected

PARIS.—Health conditions in Germany and in European countries liberated by the western allies are generally better than expected and in France and Belgium are approaching normal, Maj. Gen. Warren F. Draper, chief of the public health branch of the civil affairs division, reported.

Draper said, however, that the food situation was grim throughout Europe and estimated it would become serious in Germany within 60 days. "There isn't enough food in sight to keep some people of Europe from going hungry, but up to the present the lack of food hasn't harmed the mass of people to any great extent," he said.

In the recently liberated areas of Holland no extreme cases of starvation were found and the general situation was not as acute as expected, although there were many cases of malnutrition. Draper stated that throughout Europe there had been food available to those who had money to pay for it.

Three Japs Patch Plane For Yanks Doing It Wrong

A FIGHTER FIELD IN THE PHILIPPINES.—Half a dozen 5th air force ground crewmen were patching up a wrecked Japanese fighter plane. From the brush behind the revetment there emerged three furtive figures who approached, watched, shook their heads in disapproval. Finally the engrossed Americans looked up, stood agshast. The onlookers were Japanese.

The Yanks called an interpreter.

"They say you're not doing it right," explained the interpreter. "They want you to take them prisoners so they can help."

This formality was attended to and the Japanese—heads clipped and garbed in "PW" coats—went to work on the plane, soon had it airworthy. The three were Japanese ground crew personnel. Surrender of this type of soldier has been fairly common in Luzon.

Fatalities Are Slashed On Wounds in Chest

WASHINGTON.—The rate of surgical recovery from chest wounds suffered by American soldiers in this war is three times as great as in the last war, Army Surgeon General Norman T. Kirk said.

Asserting that chest wounds, along with head and abdominal wounds, are the most commonly fatal types of battle injuries, General Kirk declared that whereas the death rate of chest-wounded men who lived long enough to reach surgery was 24 per cent in the last war, it is now eight per cent.

"And this low rate has been achieved," said a war department statement, "in spite of the fact that chest wounds are more serious in this war because of the increase in bomb fragments."
